Why 23 September

“Balance between body, mind and nature.”

Ayurveda Day was first marked in 2016 on Dhanwantari Jayanti, a date that shifts every year with the lunar calendar.

In 2025 the Government of India fixed it to 23 September every year. That is the autumnal equinox, when day and night are nearly equal, which suits a science built on balance.

About Samarpan

Samarpan is a research-driven integrative health initiative committed to bridging the timeless wisdom of Ayurveda with the insights of modern science.

By bringing together Ayurveda, Yoga, Psychology, Nutrition, Clinical Practice, Research, Education and Public Health, we work to make holistic, evidence-informed healthcare accessible, meaningful and sustainable for individuals and communities alike.
